

Milton Bowen (Milton 510)
Visual Artist

Milton Bowens was born and raised in Oakland, California. This sparks the questions of his unique signature, Milton 510. His work has been reviewed in numerous publication, including, The Sacramento Bee, The San Francisco Chronicle, and the Los Angeles Times. Milton's work within the educational system includes lecturing at over two dozen universities and college campuses, and serving as artist in residence in over six Northern California school districts, and acting as spokesperson for Sacramento's Arts and Education partnership with J.F.K. Center for Performing Arts, Any Given Child. His artwork was also used as course of study on the Harlem Renaissance, at Cornell University, and Milton's work has recently been published in Harvard University's Transitions Magazine. Milton strongly believes that his art can "education, as well as decorate." His work can be found in the private collections of the Sa Francisco 49ers, ESPN. Sacramento Kings, California African American Museum (CAAM), Brown Foreman Corporation, Michael Jordan, Charles Barkley, LeBron James, as well as University of California-Berkeley, Laney College-Oakland, California, and California Polytechnic State University-San Luis Obispo.
